Editorial

Welcome to the second edition of East Yorkshire Encounters magazine, a determined and serious effort by two dedicated down-to-Earth geezers who are always ready to poke a proverbial stick in the eye of UFOlogy and see what sticks..? We need your help!! In accomplishing two of our goals of bringing down the subscription costs of the magazine and at the same time improving the content and quality of the magazine. How can you help, you may ask? Easy! Please tell your friends about EYE and encourage them to subscribe; the more people we can get onboard the better and cheaper this little rag will get...

While we are in an encouraging mood, we'd also like to receive letters or email from you and include these in a correspondence section near the end. So if you have any views about us, about any articles in the magazine or anything connected with UFOlogy, no matter how simple or controversial these may be – don't hesitate to send them in because we'd really appreciate your feedback?

In this issue we take a look at NASA's mapping of the Solar System's closest planet to the Sun, Mercury. Chris Evers features a nostalgic focus on the ancient astronauts theorist Erich von Daniken, in 'Was ET Here Ok?' We also include David Clarke and Clas Svahn's informed investigation of a well publicised Jet and UFO encounter over the North Sea.

Brief snippets regarding recent UK sightings, at Whitley Bay and Chorley and the FT too.

We begin a special two-part feature by Clive Potter, time served UFO Investigator and Researcher, entitled 'Mind Parasites.' If you are fed up with the usual run-of-the-mill Extraterrestrial Hypothesis then check out Clive's coherent alternative; it's sure to get at least one or two synapses alight and buzzing!

Finally, we thought it would be relevant to begin a local UFO archive feature here, highlighting past cases in the area, both solved and unsolved (there's plenty of cases to come, in fact there are hundreds and many have never been published before.

There are also new angles on known local cases and if we get an opportunity we'll also add one or two of these). We are kicking off with what undoubtedly is probably Hull's first widely recorded UFO sighting. It was part of the 1909 'phantom airship' wave and is still somewhat of a mystery today.

We hope you enjoy this issue and please remember, write in and/or tell your friends about EYE. If you have a view or want to report a UFO sighting in confidence or otherwise, please contact East Yorkshire Encounters...

NASA unveils mission to map frozen craters on Mercury

By Steve Connor, Science Editor of THE INDEPENDENT news paper.

Space scientists are to build a probe to map Mercury, the most mysterious and least explored planet of the inner solar system. One objective of the $286m (£204m) mission is to find out whether deep craters at the poles of Mercury are filled with ice despite surface temperatures elsewhere on the planet soaring to 450°C (840°F).

The American National Aeronautics and Space Administration (Nasa) said that construction of the Messenger space probe would begin immediately, to meet a scheduled launch date of March 2004. Five years will be needed for the probe to reach its final destination via a circuitous journey that will take it twice past Venus and Mercury.

The only other spacecraft to have visited Mercury was Mariner 10, which flew past the planet three times in 1974 and 1975 but could take snapshots of only half the surface area of the Sun's nearest planet.

This time, the Messenger probe will stay in orbit for at least a year to make detailed maps of the planet's strange topography as well as measuring its magnetic field and other geophysical features. A protective shield will save Messenger from the heat of the Sun. Scientists are particularly interested in the planet's polar craters. The deepest parts are in continual shadow and temperatures there never rise above minus 200°C. Radar experiments in 1991 indicated the craters could contain frozen water deposited by passing comets over billions of years.

Jay Bergstrahl, chief scientist at Nasa's Solar System Exploration Division in Washington DC, said the Messenger spacecraft was the seventh in Nasa's Discovery Programme aimed at exploring the solar system using small and relatively cheap probes. "Messenger is our most complex and challenging Discovery-class mission. Our goal is to do something never before attempted, conducting a year-long mission to orbit a planet only 36 million miles from the Sun for relatively low cost," Dr Bergstrahl said. The Earth is almost three times further from the Sun than is Mercury, the "winged messenger" of Roman mythology, and is visible only just after sunset or before sunrise. It is so close to the Sun that even the Hubble space telescope cannot take pictures of it.

Mercury is one of the four rocky or "terrestrial" planets – the others being Venus, Mars and Earth.

Was ET Here OK?

A look at the Ancient Astronaut theories of Erich von Däniken.
By Chris Evers.

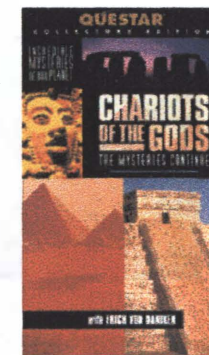

Von Daniken In Egyptian Tomb.

Various arguments concerning the theory of ancient, extraterrestrial visitation of the planet have been espoused for several decades now, from Erich von Däniken's publication of Chariots of the Gods in the late 1960's to more recent claims of seeding of our home planet, by space faring, super intelligent, God like, benevolent extraterrestrial UFO-nauts. The term Ancient Astronaut generally refers to superior intelligent, gene altering extraterrestrials, which in some way contributed to the human races development. Von Däniken, who is perhaps the more famous proponent of this theory, argues that spacecraft travelled to Earth to 'seed' the planet long before modern humanity existed. Once here, they performed outlandish breeding experiments to produce modern, intelligent humans, and then simply left the same way they travelled here, in their spacecraft, once their experiments were completed.

Born April 14, 1935 in Zofingen, Switzerland, Erich Von Däniken was raised as a strict Catholic and attended the Catholic School Saint-Michel in Fribourg. However, he never finished his education. Erich was apprenticed at a Swiss hotel at the age of 19. It was while working there, he began to write his first book, but he felt that he needed to see the sites about which he was writing, so he used 400,000 Swiss francs from the hotel to finance his travels to Egypt, Lebanon and North and South America. His first book entitled Chariots of the Gods, concentrated on von Däniken's theories that the "chariots" were actually flying saucers belonging to extraterrestrials. The authorities eventually imprisoned him for three and a half years for embezzlement. During his time in jail, he continued writing. His second book, Return of the Gods, which viewed the massive sculptures on Easter Island as having been built by or for aliens, which was another best-seller. By the time of his 1971 release from prison, 2.5 million copies of his two books had been sold in 24 languages. Von Däniken felt that the Bible was full of references to flying saucers and that the Gods referred to in the Bible were alien beings, Chariots of the Gods was all about his alien theories. In this book, he quoted parts of the Bible, although some of these were not accurate quotations. This book was published in the late 1960's, about the same time his trial for embezzlement ended. The publicity of the trial was good for book sales. His first book was later made into a movie in the United States. Boldly challenging the then accepted classical theories, of ancient anthropological origins, von Däniken boldly reinterpreted the artefacts (and some say the facts), the myths, the "prehistoric" drawings,

EYE on Myths and Legends

the ancient documents, the monoliths, the ruins of antiquity, and so on, as evidence indicating a time millennia ago when beings from other worlds descended to Earth making contact with early mankind and changing the course of history.

Nazca Lines

The Nazca Lines In Peru

The following millennia saw these benevolent beings travel to our home world with its struggling infant like early humans, on several more occasions to ensure that their experiment was progressing in the manner expected. They landed claimed von Däniken in the Peruvian desert plains around Nazca. Their craft he claimed left kilometres long gouges in the earth upon touch down. According to his theory, the ancient Nazcan natives would have believed that the "fiery chariots of the sky gods" made these lines, they carefully preserved the tracks the "gods' chariots" had made and even extended them in all directions. Von Däniken also claimed this was an interstellar airport for their flying saucers, making them according to von Däniken's theory literally thousands and thousands if not millions of years old.

In fact von Däniken was reiterating a theory that first came to light in an idea first proposed by James W. Moseley in the October 1955 issue of Fate and made popular in the early sixties by Louis Pauwels and Jacques Bergier in The Morning of the Magicians.

These lines were in fact constructed by the Nazcan people who flourished between 200 BCE (Before Common Era) and 600 CE (Common Era) along rivers and streams that flow from the Andes. Not the millennia ago espoused by von Däniken.

The desert itself runs for over 1,400 miles along the Pacific Ocean. The area of the Nazca art is called the Pampa Colorada (Red Plain). It is 15 miles wide and runs some 37 miles parallel to the Andes and the sea. Dark red surface stones and soil have been cleared away, exposing the lighter coloured subsoil, creating the "lines". There is no sand in this desert. From the air, the "lines" include not only lines and geometric shapes, but also depictions of animals and plants in stylised forms. Some of the forms, including images of humans, grace the steep hillsides at the edge of the desert it certainly must have been a VERY confusing airport.

Von Däniken, produced some startling evidence in the shape of photograph's of pottery that he claimed had been found in an archaeological dig. The pottery depicts flying saucers and was said to have been dated from Biblical times. However, investigators later discovered the potter who had made the allegedly ancient pots. They confronted von Däniken with evidence of his fraud. His reply was that his deception was justified because some people would only believe if they saw proof ("The Case of the Ancient Astronauts," first aired 3/8/78, done in conjunction with BBC's Horizon and Peter Spry-Leverton)! However, most of von Däniken's evidence is in the form of specious and fallacious arguments. His data consists mainly of archaeological sites and ancient myths. He begins with the ancient astronaut assumption and then forces all data to fit the idea.

EYE on Myths and Legends

As you can see by just examining closely one or two of his theories, von Däniken's ideas soon become a little more than questionable; Von Däniken's credibility was finally undermined after he was unable to substantiate claims made in another book, Gold of the Gods, that he had photographed metal plaques containing the wisdom of extraterrestrials. In 1977, a BBC Horizon programme, The Case of the Ancient Astronauts, took a rational look at his theories and showed them to be pseudo science. Archaeologist and Mayan expert Dr Ian Graham explained his view of the figure on the Palenque Stone. 'Well I certainly don't see any need to regard him as a space-man,' he said. 'I don't see any oxygen tubes. I see a very characteristically drawn Maya face.' Numerous other wonders cited by von Däniken as corroboration for his theories were similarly debunked. In the late 1970s he rapidly disappeared from the public arena, and in 1982 he could not find an English or American publisher for his 10th book. In the past few years, however, his ideas have again started to become popular in a culture fascinated by programmes such as The X Files. He is also working on a huge theme park in Switzerland, called the Mysteries of the World, and money is gushing into the project. Scientist or pseudo scientist, heretic or visionary, he is certainly tenacious and a master at whipping up a frenzy in the public imagination.

Local interest in Erich von Däniken was sparked off in 1969, when Souvenir Press first published 'Chariot Of The Gods' in this country. An earlier version of von Däniken first book was published in German under the title 'Erinnerungen an die Zukunft'. There was another local resurgence of interest when an article appeared in the Hull Times, in 1977, which discussed the man and his theories.

Of course it is possible that visitors from a-far did visit the planet thousands of years ago and perhaps did communicate with our ancient ancestors. But it seems more probable that our prehistoric ancestors were responsible for their own art technology and cultures. Why concoct such an elaborate explanation as von Däniken's? To do so may increase the mystery and romance of his theories, but it also makes it less reasonable, especially when one's theory seems inconsistent with what we already know about the world. The ancient astronaut hypothesis is, in my opinion, unnecessary. Occam's razor should be applied and the hypothesis rejected.

I, for one, must admit that back in the early 1970's when as an interested 13 year old, he had captured my imagination too, and the thought of man being planted here by intelligent space faring humanoids was one of those that attracted me to the subject of UFOlogy. But, after a little digging and examining of his theories, I disappointingly no longer view him as the expert I once took him to be, and view him now as more of a showman and entertainer, which is a shame really as the thought of our 'alleged' God like creators being extraterrestrials, is one that I today would still find interesting, and quite entertaining.

EYE on Recent UK Sightings

WHITLEY BAY —A thirteen year old student writes, My teacher in assembly today said that around 10:30 PM on March 4, 2002, on the Whitley Bay coast (NE England) he saw three UFO's in a triangle formation moving at light speed to different positions.

CHORLEY — I was in the White Coppice area tonight and noticed what appeared to be a "string of pearls" configuration travelling toward the northbound M62 motorway. The "pearls" were highly luminous and not "lit up" in the usual sense of the word. The pearls were moving quite slowly so I took off in the car in an attempt to follow. I met up with it near to the motorway junction at Chorley. I must say that it was easy to follow because of its slow speed. It continued to fly over the M62 north then turned toward Blackburn. It didn't increase its speed until it passed the BA works at Salmsbury, I then had to hit the gas to keep it in sight. Luckily the road was quiet so I could put my foot down. (In case there are any police on the list, I won't say what speed I was going!) Even though I was really shifting the "thing" soon outpaced me and I lost sight of it near to Great Harrowed, it then simply vanished over Pendle Hill. There! were 6 "pearls" that seemed to belong to one object. But it must have been quite large. There were no strobe lights. I must mention that throughout the "sighting" I didn't feel at all well, light-headed and talking to myself in a sort of moaning and muttering way. Once the "pearls" left I began to recover. I later stopped at a shop and mentioned what I'd seen, the shopkeeper told me that he too had seen such a phenomenon when stood at his shop door chatting to a customer. His opinion was that it was the witches of Pendle on their broomsticks! Who knows since they have been reported for hundreds of years? Thanks to Bill

Is This The FT?

El Segundo - March 26, 2002

Northrop Grumman's Integrated Systems sector has completed several milestones in preparation for the first flight of its X-47A Pegasus experimental unmanned air vehicle. Earlier this month (march 2002), the Pegasus flight test team successfully completed its third engine run test. That test, conducted March 16, as well as the earlier engine runs in December and January, are in preparation for the X-47A's first autonomous engine run later this spring. The Pegasus team's most intensive work has been to test and integrate avionics and software in the systems integration laboratory at Northrop Grumman's Advanced Systems Development Centre here. "Conducting this extensive integration in a laboratory environment is critical to ensure the success of autonomous unmanned operations," said Bob Mitchell, vice president-Advanced Systems Development for Northrop Grumman Integrated Systems. "We are following the same process we used to develop past unmanned systems, including the Global Hawk and other programs." After this phase of systems checkout is completed, the X-47A will be moved to Naval Weapons Centre, China Lake, Calif., for taxi tests and first flight.

Red Star In Orbit

By Chris Evers

The Chinese space agency boasts they could have a man on the Moon by the year 2010. But just how close are they to reaching this achievement?

It was announced that the Shenzhou 3 spacecraft was launched at 10.15 pm local time aboard a Long March II F rocket from the Jiuquan satellite launch centre, papers say, on Tuesday 26 March, 2002. It was also announced that in attendance to watch the red rocket blast off was Chinese President Jiang Zemin.

China has the largest Military in the world it is much larger than the US and only modern technology keeps America ahead in the race for military supremacy. Yet foolishly it was the Clinton Administration which provided the much sought after technology to the Chinese for advanced satellites for weather, resource monitoring, intelligence, and communications purposes?

It is known that the US are closely monitoring quality problems at China's Jiuquan Space Launch Centre where the Shenzhou 1 system was first launched in November 1999, this craft circling the Earth 14 times before parachuting back into Inner Mongolia. In January of 2001, Shenzhou 2, a multi-module space vehicle circled the Earth for almost seven days and 108 orbits. Undoubtedly the US authorities are somewhat concerned that the Chinese are developing a presence in orbit, and the lost revenue in satellite launches.

To realize its goal of exploring outer space and expanding shares in the global satellite launch market, China has stepped up the design and development of carrier rockets with non-toxic, non-pollution, high-performance and low-cost qualities, said Zhang Qingwei, president of the China Aerospace Science and Technology Corp (CASC).

He went on to say, that developing the new generation of launch vehicles is the key to maintaining the country's edge in the world aerospace field and boosting its economic expansion. China plans to launch its attended space station "at an appropriate time this century," Zhang said, declining to specify a timetable.

It is known however that China needs to improve capacity on its Long March rocket to fulfil the long term goal of a Chinese astronaut on the moon. Watch this space and do not put it past the Chinese.

EYE on Alien Intervention

THE MIND PARASITES: A MIRROR INTO THE SOUL OF MANKIND TOWARDS AN UNDERSTANDING OF THE UFO PHENOMENON

PART ONE

Since the first publicised sightings of what are today known as UFOs were made back in 1947, the study of UFOs (UFOlogy) has floundered like a stranded whale on a deserted beach, attempting to substantiate not only the reality of the reports but what they represent. This has often been done within the context of prevailing values and beliefs.

Over half a century later proponents of the subject are still grappling with the Phenomenon. Although great strides have been made with regards to elucidating a substantial proportion of UFO reports through the development of the earthlights hypothesis, the plasma-vortex hypothesis, inversion mirage effects, electrical sensitivity effects, knowledge of secret military technology and covert experimentation and advances in understanding human psychology, the Phenomenon itself remains largely unresolved. The core phenomenon seems to represent structured craft, alien encounters and abductions, "alien" messages and bizarre interactions with phenomena that only today do we label as "extraterrestrial".

Despite years of research and debate we are still no nearer in unmasking the UFO phenomenon, proponents do battle with one another, not only over the very existence of the phenomenon, but also as to what they may or may not represent. We have the sceptics on one hand who have a tendency to dismiss all reports or consign them to an area marked 'psychological'; in other words a convenient vehicle with which to deal more easily with experiences that defy all rational explanations and scientific laws. Equally, on the other side, we have an army of believers who tend to accept without question the existence of UFOs, by which term is generally meant to be "extraterrestrial" and the rest of the ragbag of beliefs that go along with it. All reports are believed, rationality is suspended and assumptions that we are dealing with a variety of alien, demonic, angelic or divine entities involved in the wide range of encounter experiences spread across the globe and throughout history are commonplace. These assumptions have taken over and corrupted serious investigation of the Phenomenon, except for a few independent stalwarts, and has ensured that not only do we remain kept in the dark about the true nature of the Phenomenon, but it has meant that few outside the closeted world of UFOlogy have taken the subject with much seriousness.

Alternatively, why are we supposed to believe that the UFO Phenomenon is amenable to a solution? After all, the Phenomenon has purportedly been manifesting in our skies for hundreds, if not thousands, of years. Are we any nearer to its elucidation? Are we capable of solving it? Do we really want to? Safe in the security of our belief systems and present day values, many are content in seeing them as a mystery which has nothing to do with their lives, whilst others prefer to see them as symbolic of a mystery that has, to all purposes, replaced a lost religion with a plastic spirituality. Are they not simply projecting their own present day technological and cultural viewpoint on to a phenomenon that, by its very nature, has been able to evade definition throughout time and has seemingly manifested in a variety of guises - airships, foofighters, ghost rockets and aeroplanes - to space-ships; their occupants ranging from demons, angels, and faeries, to extraterrestrial beings? Encounters with extraterrestrial beings seem to range from tall blond Nordic types to small grey foetus-like beings, monsters, imps, faery-like entities and ghost-like apparitions. Meanwhile, the home planets of these entities are as diverse as their actual appearances. Earth is, seemingly, a truly multi-species community!

When one begins to look at the entire spectrum and how witnesses perceive the Phenomenon one begins to feel uneasy and suspicious about not only the beliefs and intentions of some of the people studying it, but also as to its exact origin and nature. The Phenomenon has hidden its tracks well, always maintaining a parallel course with mankind's technological and cultural developments and expectations. Rather like mist, it shifts with the winds of man's consciousness, obscuring its real nature and all too quickly evaporating when the light of reason or scientific tools are applied - only to condense once again when conditions are right for it to reform, in a form that can be assimilated within the culture it manifests. Today the abduction phenomenon has forced itself upon us, giving rise to countless victims to this otherworldly terror, rooted out by the 20th-century equivalents of medieval witch finder generals - the abduction researchers - aided and abetted by a sensationalist media and eager public. Are we to expect that we are to achieve any sort of success in identifying the perpetrators of these cosmic crimes? Abductions have been occurring in various guises for hundreds of years, throughout mythology, and have often been the catalyst of religions. Are we expected to break through this curtain of smoke and mirrors now?

Despite the seemingly impenetrable nature of the Phenomenon and its effects on the belief systems of humanity - which I believe is an essential component of the phenomenon and its purpose - I do not think that we are ever going to solve the true nature and origin of the UFO Phenomenon because I believe that we can. Any real understanding of the Phenomenon must encompass three stipulations: it must offer an adequate explanation for all the features encountered; it must not run counter to any established fact, and it must be predictive. All previous attempts at finding a satisfactory solution have failed in at least several aspects. These attempts are from either end of the spectrum: that one accepts either the reality of an extraterrestrial agency visiting earth, or that one assumes that the subconscious mind can create a hallucinatory reality as the result of conflicts within the mind of a witness.

Inconsistencies, distortions and paradoxes

The UFO Phenomenon is, by its characteristics, full of inconsistencies, distortions and paradoxes that are senseless if seen from the viewpoint of the ET hypothesis. There are simply too many close encounter reports, often involving different types of craft and of occupants, bizarre communications and ghost-like qualities for these to be a real, physical visitation from another world. Individual witnesses present together often produce different descriptions than mere observational errors suggest. In other cases there has only been a single witness experiencing something, sometimes in a built-up area where one would expect a mass sighting. In other cases, a witness experiences an encounter at the same time as being observed by others who do not see anything. Yet in other cases the witnesses have the experience whilst in the bedroom asleep, or have the experiences suddenly retrieved by hypnotic regression.

Many of these experiences exhibit a dream-like quality in their manifestation and contents, with objects materialising and dematerialising, in a manner that physical objects operating in the physical universe could not possibly do. Occupants will emerge through the sides of crafts, rather than a door. Abductees are transported through walls without anyone seeing them. The interior of the crafts are sometimes bizarrely decked out or occupied by strange creatures and paraphernalia; witnesses do not seem to be able to remove artefacts from the crafts. Occupants will float in the air, appear ghost-like and leave no residues or artefacts behind. Objects make landings yet leave no traces that can be tested scientifically. These suggest that what we are dealing with is not objective, but subjective.

Yet the majority of these reports are genuine with witnesses relating something that they genuinely believe has happened to them. But we are dealing with a different reality that obeys different laws. Where we must depart from those explanations that suggest that UFO interactions are merely subjective imagery and derived from the murmurings of the subconscious mind, is the realisation that there is also a very real and external agency involved, one that has remained undetected or ignored throughout the history of the UFO myth. Yet it has been recognised and described throughout history as otherworldly intelligences, end even worshipped or feared in different cultural guises. Within different religious texts and occult works, descriptions of the interactions of these beings with humanity occur, some of them depicting the same behaviour as what is happening today.

The UFO Phenomenon is therefore merely the latest in line, a technological manifestation, of archetypal imagery in which hides the intelligences behind such manifestations. There is more to the subjective imagery than that described by the psycho sociological school of UFO debunkers. Carl Jung, in 'Flying Saucers - A Modern Myth of Things Seen in the Sky', on more than one occasion hinted at deeper reasons for the archetypal imagery because it seemed to take his hypothesis of archetypes beyond the theme of the collective unconscious. It seems as if there is another kind of intelligence within man's psyche, which produces these archetypal images - and that is the crux of the problem and, indeed, the solution to the final understanding of the UFO Phenomenon.

Ultimately, we are drawn towards a conclusion that suggests that behind the UFO Phenomenon lies a manipulative intelligence, and that this sort of control system can manifest as aliens, angels and demons, faeries, monsters, the Virgin Mary and, in many cases, as seemingly human spirit guides. The one variable that seems to determine the content and behaviour of the manifestations would seem to be dependent upon the particular level of human acceptability. To be more specific the vast pool of archetypal imagery that encompasses the human collective unconsciousness determines its presentation, be that within a Christian context of a demonic possession or Vision of the Virgin Mary, or within a UFO context in modern day USA or UK, such as that of abduction by grey aliens. In each case neither agency involved is aware of any other scenario. The demon in a possession case never speaks of space ships or the need for genetic supplies. Each agency feeds off the realities of each particular human consciousness. These agencies act as we both expect and fear them.

Closer examination will show, however, remarkable similarities. Real demonic possession cases only account for a small percentage of reported demonic cases, as do the unexplained UFO reports. The demonic intelligence behind a possession will often impart a sense of importance or a mission to the possessed, exactly as we find in the contactee side of UFOlogy. There is, too, the archetypal conflict of 'good' and 'evil', exactly as we find demonstrated in much of the contactee scenarios, whilst the human victim often produces an impressive array of paranormal abilities whilst under the control of the demon. Many of the beliefs of contactees and abductees, allegedly passed on by the space brothers or abducting aliens, are reminiscent of beliefs held by those who are demonically possessed, passed on to them by their parasitic intelligences, such as the belief that an intellectual elite rules the world. Many of the physiological symptoms described by missionaries as "possession" are similar to those suffered by contactees and those who experience a close UFO encounter - unaccountable faints, nightmares, headaches, loss of memory, often accompanied by strange psychological and psychic events - visions, poltergeists, nocturnal visitations of apparitions (described in medieval times as incubi and succubi).

Each category of intelligence seems to occupy its own defined world, totally ignorant of the existence of these other intelligences. And that is exactly the defining circumstances that separate the spectrum of intelligences. Each intelligence acts and appears only within the expectation and values of the culture within which it manifests. The determining controls are the individual packets of belief that make up the total human collective unconsciousness.

The group consciousness of mankind is that set of imagery and experience, expectations and emotion that make up the psychic life history and future expectations of the human race. Layers of belief and awareness, worship and fear has, over the thousands of years that mankind has evolved, developed a complexity of belief systems and levels of human emotional and psychic acceptability. Within the overall human unconsciousness there exists side by side, the world of the Christian and of the Muslim, of the primitive shaman, of the extraterrestrial believers and a host of innumerable group worlds, sometimes interacting to produce hybrid beliefs but usually remaining independent and powerful in their own right.

This is the region of the hidden

mind, the vast reservoir of the human collective unconscious to which we are all indivisibly linked. The lowest levels are penetrable only through the use of, for example, hypnosis or the skills of the shaman or medium. This is the environment through which the mechanisms of the paranormal operate.

The collective unconsciousness is also the environment in which the intelligence that manifest as UFOs and aliens, faeries, demons and angels and spirits, can operate. The phenomenon of clairvoyance, telepathy, precognition and psycho kinesis are used to link in with sections of humanity it wishes to influence, manipulating the subtle yet more powerful parts of man which are the emotional and archetypal centres.

The power of such controlled manipulation of these realms can be illustrated by the magical adepts who can create a mental three-dimensional object and then draw it into this reality in the form of a consciously controlled apparition. Similar examples occur as apparitions that arrive unannounced in séance rooms where a physical medium is used to bring about physical manifestations.

So it is within the collective unconsciousness that one must look to for the source and nature of the UFO phenomenon. This is the environment of external intelligences that are of this earth and bought into existence by an alien creative source. The studies of researchers as Christian O'Brien and others have suggested that outsiders of advanced intellectual and spiritual calibre, whom the native cultures called 'gods', founded early human civilisations. Ancient texts and myths offer evidence for this interaction that also included genetic manipulation of the aboriginal human species. For instance, Sumerian myths from the ancient Middle East describe these creator gods as the Anannage. In the Bible they are known as the Elohim, the Shining Ones. The Sumerian Kharsag Epics (amongst other ancient texts) describe the activities of the gods and their creation of mankind (lulu - a labouring creature) in ninth millennium Sumer. The Book of Enoch also gives an account of an order of beings known as the Watchers (egregoroi), who acted against the commands of the Archangels and Anannage (the rebellion of the angels) because they had wronged mankind in various ways. This may be a simplified version of events, which in fact describe how the angels, or Watchers, had become contaminated by the baser instincts of mankind as they were indelibly linked in with mankind's collective unconsciousness. The Anannage then destroyed the Watchers as suggested in the hypothesis, that is, the physical annihilation of the beings and the removal of their spiritual consciousnesses into spiritual or interdimensional realms.

The Messengers Of The Gods

Ultimately, when the 'gods' departed, the messengers of the gods, the angels, were physically destroyed and consigned to spiritual realms. Before they had acted as teachers and communicators between the 'gods' and mankind. Man could not differentiate between the 'gods' and 'angels', since both possessed divine form and abilities. From mythology and ancient sources it seems that they had been annihilated because of unauthorised interaction between them and

man. It is possible that the 'messengers' or 'angels' had been corrupted by man's consciousness, since the fusion of the physical animal part of man with the spiritual part was not working. The intermediaries, since they were designed to work with man, would have been gradually submerged with man's more baser instincts. Certainly we have records suggesting that the process was not working and that the 'rebellion of the angels' and the 'war in heaven' saw the destruction of these beings from earth. But their spiritual essences were placed in spiritual realms where their functioning continued.

We could describe these beings, or angels or Watchers, as AIs, that is as "Artificial Intelligences", because they were in effect artificial creations designed like computers with spiritual programming. It can also mean "Artificial Intermediaries" because these beings were designed to mediate between man and the gods, to oversee mankind and help him evolve, to act as messengers like those of the two ravens in Norse mythology who acted as the messengers for Odin. Their names when translated are Thought and Memory, the two principle attributes of man's consciousness. The computer terminology serves to place these beings outside the realm of religion and mythology, and help to characterise them as complex purposefully designed computer-spiritual creations. These AIs were beings of energy, functioning in a manner of a computer, modifying their programmes according to changes in man's consciousness.

The AIs would have helped in constructing that consciousness with the purpose of guiding man's evolution in a direction that the original creators of humanity desired. Thus the AIs themselves would have contributed in modifying it, whilst undergoing changes as man's thoughts and emotions developed. But ultimately mankind failed to develop in harmony with the divine plans and it was the animal instinct with its powerful drive of emotion and unbalanced individuality that gained the upper hand.

Throughout mankind's history it has been the AIs that have continued to propagate their programming, updating the beliefs and values of humanity and in turn being reprogrammed through man's collective unconsciousness. They have been a primary driving force behind man's development, both positively and negatively. Although their forms and behaviour have changed in accordance with prevailing cultural and technological changes of man, their role has remained constant. Most of the detailed information about the angelic orders are derived from esoteric texts. There has always been a certain ambiguity between angels and demons. Prior to the third century AD angels had a dual nature, very dynamic and constantly evolving. Similarly, the faeries of the middle Ages were actually large and malevolent entities, unlike the much later Victorian concepts of faeries.

It is within pre-Christian traditions, however, that we find much evidence of the image of angels as intermediaries between God and man. Plutarch, in "on the Cessation of Oracles", describes a family of "Daemons" who are intermediate between gods and men "and after a certain fashion bringing thought together and uniting in one society of both". In Plato's Symposium, Eros is described as "a great spirit (daemon), and like all spirits he is intermediate between the divine and the mortal". Eros "interprets between gods and men... he is the mediator who spans the chasm which divides them, and therefore in him all is bound together, and through him the arts of the prophet and the priest, their sacrifices and charms, and all prophecy and incantation, find their way". Then it is concluded, "These spirits or intermediate powers are many and diverse".

Sceptics have argued that within UFO reports there is simply the collective unconsciousness behind the imagery of the alien. But it may be that what we are dealing with is an alien within the human collective unconsciousness. So we have the scenario of a hidden intelligence creating images and experiences from within the collective unconsciousness of human witnesses.

JET CREW ENCOUNTER UFO OVER NORTH SEA

David Clarke

Several national newspapers in Britain carried a story at the latter end of April 1999 describing a mid-air encounter involving the crew of a small passenger jet with a UFO over the North Sea.

The Daily Mirror reported on April 28, how the crew said they noticed an "incandescent" light below their Debonair BAe 146 as it headed over the North Sea from Sweden to Humberside. The account claimed, "A long cylindrical silver-coloured object the size of a battleship [then] flew alongside. The British plane's shocked captain then saw what seemed to be rows of square portholes on the UFO before it vanished at "enormous speed." The Mirror claimed the crew reported the sighting to the MOD upon landing, and added a further detail: namely that an RAF radar station had also tracked the mystery object which was also seen from three other planes.

The Mirror had apparently lifted the story from an embellished account, which had appeared the previous day in the London Evening Standard. It was here that the phrase "as big as a battleship" had first occurred. The Standard revealed the Luton-based plane had been flying Saab company executives from Sweden to Humberside airport in East Yorkshire when the UFO appeared, 58 miles off the coast of Denmark. The account said "... the object came to a sudden halt before speeding by the airliner in the incident on 3rd February." It added that "pilots reported being buzzed by a "long, cylindrical object" at 28,000ft and one pilot and his crew described how the underside of their jet became bathed in an

EYE on Slightings (Airport Update)

"incandescent light"...The Civil Aviation Authority has confirmed that a comprehensive report of the sightings has been handed in, although both it and the Ministry of Defence deny that they are investigating it." The official report filed by Debonair with the CAA was released to UFOIN on April 30. A spokeswoman told us that it had been classified, as "a mandatory occurrence report" and the CAA were taking no further action, as "there was no danger to the aircraft or passengers. Despite the Press claims that the UFO had been sighted by the jet's crew it was pointed out that only the pilot had filed a report. None of the passengers had apparently reported seeing the UFO. She added that the pilot is currently on leave and a request has been put out for him to make a statement to the press when he returns. Details such as the "square portholes", "big as a battleship", "long cylindrical object" do not appear in the report and appear to exist only in the imagination of the Daily Mail and the Evening Standard. It is clear that what was seen by the aircraft pilot was simply a light - nothing more. It was added that the pilot assumed the light beneath the jet were those of another aircraft at the time they were seen. The Debonair spokeswoman said the company had been "snowed under" with inquiries from the press since details of the sighting had been revealed.

The Debonair report to the CAA report reads:

"Unidentified bright light below BAe146 at FL280.

"Area below a/c illuminated for 10 seconds by incandescent light which was not considered by reporter to be an a/c landing light. Reporter stated three other a/c reported seeing it moving at high speed or static. ATC informed but they reported no other a/c in vicinity. Five minutes later a radar return was present at 75 miles on weather radar. Atmosphere reported as stable and no other a/c were in vicinity." The aircraft involved was a British Aerospace 146, a small four-engine jet flying on a chartered flight from Linköping in Sweden to Humberside Airport in East Yorkshire. The UFO was reported whilst the aircraft was flying at 28,000 feet, 58 miles off the Danish coast above the North Sea. Tracey Law, of Humberside Airport, said the report was made by the pilot to the CAA on landing, but there was "no mention made whatsoever of UFOs in the original report. It has since been embellished. It was not mentioned to us officially as it happened outside of our airspace." In particular she pointed out that the description of the UFO as the press had manufactured being "as big as a battleship", and this detail did not appear in the pilot's report to the CAA. Humberside Airport said they believed the sighting had been caused by "a light reflection from the underside of the jet." Flight Lieutenant Tom Rounds of the RAF Press desk at the Ministry of Defence, Whitehall, said the MOD had learned of the report via the Press. He said stories that the object had been tracked by RAF radar were "laughable" as the UK radar could not pick up objects 58 miles off the Danish coast. Swedish UFOlogists later established that a return had been picked up by the plane's own weather radar, not the military radar as reported by the press. Flt Lieut Rounds said the MOD were not investigating the report, and had not received any report concerning it from the CAA. Clas Svahn of UFO Sweden: was independently making his own inquiries into this sighting as I was attempting to obtain an interview with the pilot in the UK. On UFO Sweden's website Clas posted the following summary of his work on the case early in May, 1999: "Some of you may have heard of or read about the incident with four commercial airliners involved that occurred over Danish aerospace February 3rd 1999. According to newspapers in England the pilots saw a "red object moving rapidly and suddenly stopping before leaving, it was also seen on radar". The incident occurred south west of Jylland, over the community of Ramme near Limfjorden. "UFO-Sweden's investigation into the case includes contacts with Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS), two of the aircrafts were from SAS telephone conversations with Debonair (the airline which pilot filed the report), Danish Civil Aviation Authority and flight security department Swedish military radar experts Swedish astronomer who is an expert on Bolides and meteors Saab Military Aircraft (whose personnel were onboard but did not see the light) and others.

"Since the time of the incident is not stated [in the CAA report] I have tried to establish that through different sources. According to Danish CAA the observation was made at 17.25 GMT (5.25 PM). It is clear that the report have been heavily exaggerated in English and Swedish media. The object was not, as stated in Daily Mirror I think, "large as a battleship". It was not an object at all but a light shining on the see below the aircraft. "During my conversations with professor Bertil Lindblad, authority on bolides, he confirms that they do leave a trail of ionised gas that reflects on radar behind. The time of observation (10 seconds) does also confirm that the object most likely was a bolide. The time frame between the observation and the radar return is however open to question. I have supplied the pilot from Debonair with a questionnaire to get more accurate information on this matter. I have also sent the same questions to SAS who has promised me to give them to their pilots." On May 15 Clas was able to discuss the case with the head of military radar in the Swedish Department of Defence, who had reviewed the "tapes" (CD-ROMs) of the radar returns from the night of February 3. He said he found "nothing" on the tapes. Clas observed that Swedish Air Force radar can see just outside the area where the Debonair plane made the observation and he added: "...as far as I can understand the object could have been thousands of miles from there." At the time of writing there appears little reason to doubt the suggestion by the Swedish professor that the object reported by the Debonair pilot was a fireball meteor of some description.

The Press reports of this sighting were once again filled with miss reporting and distortion of details, presumably to make a "good story." In particular, the claim that the UFO was "as big as a battleship" appears to have been culled directly from the newspaper cuttings files. Precisely the same words were used to describe a UFO allegedly tracked by the RAF flying over the North Sea, in an exclusive story published in the Daily Mail and Daily Express on Monday, April 27, 1998. This craft is said to have flown at 17,000 mph in a zigzag pattern before accelerating to an improbable 24,000 mph across the Atlantic. It was claimed that two Dutch F-16 fighters had been scrambled to pursue this UFO, which was tracked by the RAF Fylingdales listening station in North Yorkshire. The source of this story was later revealed as a disgruntled former editor of RAF News, who had left under a cloud and had since sold sensational stories to the tabloid press on a variety of aeronautical topics.

EYE on Reviews

Out of the Shadows: UFOs, the Establishment & the official Cover-up is the new UFO book by David Clarke and Andy Roberts, published by Piatkus and it is available NOW!

Having read the Observer's review and now having read the book myself, I have to say that in my own opinion, I find the Observer's view less than accurate.

Easy to read and detailed in explaining who's who, I personally found that whether you have witnessed UFO's or whether you'd dismiss the idea at the wave of a hand, David Clarke and Andy Roberts' new book, 'Out of the Shadows' is one of the most factual and down to earth books I've come across on the subject. Do the government keep reports of UFO's secret to stop panic and/or the influx of hoaxes that surround any publicity? Or because they're plain embarrassed that they cannot give scientific proof of what these objects are?

'Ghost rockets' around the time of the 2nd world war. Were they in truth UFO's of the E.T. kind or were the Russians behind them as the British MoD believed at the time? Where is the evidence that would support either? The book covers the subject of officially reported UFO sightings objectively and with an open-mindedness all too often missing. The book shows there has indeed been side-stepping and cover ups by the government for a variety of reasons, and Out of the Shadows contains actual copies of recently released documents to support many of the claims made over the last 60 plus years with regards to the handling of reported sightings. Credible witnesses who were no strangers to aircraft and their limitations of the times gave detailed reports of their own sightings that were seemingly dismissed publicly while in reality, behind scenes, almost panicked investigations took place. Air force 'group' witnesses were not shown the reports made by 'Scientific Intelligence' and they were warned not to ask questions or even discuss the matter between themselves (themselves being the dozens of witnesses) any further. MoD reports made following witness testimonies were nothing short of 'ludicrous' at times and where they simply can not explain where these objects come from (nor can be 'seen' to admit this) they clearly have gone to great lengths showing far more 'imagination' in their own sometimes farfetched official conclusions of what some sightings were.

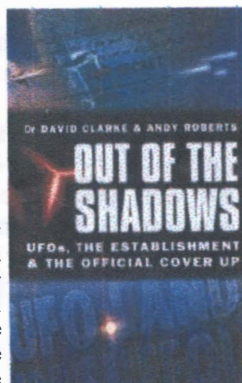

If they cannot prove it exists, then 'publicly' it does not exist. But as a quote from the book, by Air Chief Marshal Lord Dowding in an old newspaper report states (and seems to sum up) "I have never seen a flying saucer and yet I believe they exist. I have never seen Australia, and yet I believe that too, exists."

But how did officials finally handle and explain these, as they often referred to as 'figments of imagination' when UFO's appeared right in the middle of a NATO exercise?

Contrary to the report in the Observer which made it sound as though the entire book was based on the writers' own opinions, I found the book to be accurate of the subject and the governments handling of it, backed up by the documents that are over time, increasing in availability.

A book I'd recommend no matter which side of the fence you lean towards.

EYE on Hull's First UFO?

So you think UFO reports are a recent phenomena?

Gary Anthony, delves into the EYE UFO archives and re-examines Hull's ufological past. In view of the recent ufology uk article regarding phantom airships seen in Essex in 1909, perhaps the reader may appreciate how relevant it is to document ufo sightings connected with a wave and to scrutinise them correctly.
Editor.

Hull's First UFO

By Gary Anthony © 2002

During astronomical correlation research into the 1913 phantom airship sighting wave and file of Nigel Watson et al, during 1989 for BUFORA, David Clarke drew my attention to an earlier wave of phantom airships in 1909, which had reference to possibly Hull's first recorded UFO sighting. In late 1989, I did indeed find three such references for local sightings for the week beginning Monday 10th May to Sunday 16th May 1909. These sightings occurred just before the famous sensationalised story of Mr G Lethbridge of Cardiff, Wales, who claimed he had encountered a strange landed airship on a lonely Welsh mountaintop. Scurrying aeronauts clambered back aboard their craft and took off towards Cardiff and later six workers at Cardiff docks subsequently saw the craft and validated Mr. Lethbridge's account. The story swept across the nation, later featuring in many of the main newspapers of the day and caused widespread consternation, certainly it is occasionally revived in the odd UFO book and other literature.

The first sighting in Hull occurred on Thursday 13 May, 1909 and was reported by Mr A. Walker of 31 Coltman Street, (Anlaby-Hessle Road) Hull and also seen by Mr Walker's parents residing at same address. In his own words the young Mr Walker stated:

"At about 11 o'clock on Thursday night I was coming out of the greenhouse. I had just put out the light, when something flashed across my eyes, something like a flash of lightning." "I looked up and there was a patch of light in the sky. It looked like a street gas lamp seen in a fog. It was working to the west, and seemed to be tacking a little as if going against the wind which was forcing it back."

"It was like a luminous body seen through the clouds—arc shaped. I heard also a peculiar whirring noise. The light was high up – about a mile up I should think. It was dark and cloudy at the time; but I had the light under my observation for about two minutes." "I immediately called my father and my mother, who were in the house, and they also both saw the light as it travelled westward."

Mr Walker's father described the sighting as an amazing "light suspended in the air." What is even stranger regarding the Walker's sighting, has been the difficulty attributing it to any particular known airship visiting this area? Although the feeling of the event is quite evident in the description, it should be stressed that Mr Walker only decided to report his observation in view of other newspaper reports circulating about phantom airships at the time. What is more curious, is that a mysterious airship was also reported during the same week in Hull by three other local residents. Two observant persons on the following night, Friday 14 May, 1909; reported a strange airship from the Boulevard area of the city and stated that the aerial craft they saw seemed to be directly over the River Humber. From the clouds, the witnesses say they watched a piercing searchlight emanate and focus down onto the river for a very short duration. A lady in West Hull too reported she had observed a strange light in the sky during the same week; and confirmed the aforementioned light also hovered not far from the River Humber. In view of later developments some may think the Humber a dangerous place for airships to manoeuvre, as those few who are still aware of airship transits around the River over the years can recall and tell... Twenty years after the 1909 phantom airships, the R38/ZR11 airship was flying over the Humber at 5 pm on 24th August 1921, during a test flight, when it executed a tight turn over the Humber near Hull. Tens of thousands of eyewitnesses saw the R38 dirigible ship appear to crumple in half. Subsequently the airship's nose section exploded in two bursts killing forty four of the crew, reportedly shattering windows on the ground and leaving only five survivors in the tail section, which didn't alight, before all the wreckage finally fell disastrously into the Humber. Disaster struck another airship, the R34 on January 28, 1921, while over the Humber and this craft also later crashed on land without loss of life.

It appears strange sightings in Hull skies are not a new phenomenon, and people at the beginning of the century, as today also report UFOs in the context of current available aerial technology. Whatever the answers are to this nearly one hundred year mystery of unidentified airships, it seems firmly and deeply embedded within the annals of local history and culture; and still manages to attract a fair amount of hypothesising and occasional surprise when rediscovered by new generations. Watch this space for further past reports.

Jenny Randles

'To use an analogy. This UFO phenomenon is like a beach. As a whole this responds to the tide (which we can liken to the psychological belief system). Some elements - particles of sand etc. - are easily shifted, but pebbles and rocks are more resistant. If we analyse the components of the beach - pebbles, sand, seashells, seaweed etc.- we find a wide variety with several different origins. Yet if we analyse the beach as a whole, as with the UFO phenomenon, we only learn about the overriding influences such as the tides (or the psycho-social influences). If we divide it up into its constituent parts we learn about the phenomena that are of interest to many different sciences - seashells (biologists), seaweed (botanists), pebbles (geologists) and so on. We may even discover something entirely new amongst the debris on the beach. That is the challenge before us.'

Manchester's Aerial Phenomena Investigation Team. 1974-1989

MAPIT was first formed in August of 1974 and based in Stockport UK. At that time MAPIT investigators only researched UFO incidents, hence its name at that time. The Chairman, Mr. Reese ran the organisation until its closure in 1989.

Manchester's Anomalous Phenomena Investigation Team. (1995-2000)

In 1995, Mr. Stephen Mera re-formed the organisation to incorporate the scientific study of anomalous phenomena. A much wider range of phenomena was to be investigated and researched, including subjects such as the paranormal and supernatural.

Manchester's Association of Paranormal Investigators & Training. (2000-)

In January of 2000 MAPIT underwent another re-formation and changed its name due to MAPIT's work with Investigation & Training Programs & Courses. MAPIT started its training course in September of 1996 and is still currently running. The British Investigators Training Course (BITC) is the most comprehensive course of its kind in the UK. The BITC has three separate courses from basic to advanced and professional, all of which are a 20 week course which is tutored at schools and colleges around the Manchester area. Any of the courses are also available via correspondence world wide. MAPIT have over 200 overseas BITC qualified investigators and over 400 in the UK. MAPIT currently have quarterly meetings at the Friends Meeting House on Park Road, Sale, Cheshire on the first Thursday of the month starting February 2002. Prior to this, MAPIT had their meetings at the Friends Meeting House on Mount Street, Manchester since 1997, but were forced to move due to parking difficulties.

MAPIT currently have around 40 members of which 25 are investigators. Our investigations are generally throughout Greater Manchester, however, we do also operate outside that area. MAPIT have their own quarterly group magazine entitled 'Phenomena' which costs £2.00. This journal discusses our investigations and research, latest findings, news, reviews, free advertising and much more.

MAPIT also offers free analysis of audio & video anomalies as well as photography to the general public. The video trading centre is another service we provide. Interested in exchanging videos? Choose from our extensive lists which can be found on our web page. The most significant investigation is that of poltergeist infestations where a paranormal water forming was captured and analysed by North West Water Laboratories. The findings were amazing, again, full details can be found on our web site.

MAPIT are currently investigating a rather new phenomenon referred to as High Velocity Anomalies, which are often captured of photographic film and digital cameras at places renowned for their paranormal activity. Also the study of galvanic skin resistance in association with Electromagnetic fields & Geomagnetic fields. We hope to present a scientific document to universities late in 2002.

MAPIT also conducts lectures and talks at schools, colleges, libraries, similar groups etc. Lectures can be booked via contacting the Head Office.

MAPIT members specialise in Computers, Photography, Radio Broadcasting & Teaching and often are involved with television documentaries, radio presentations and writing articles for magazines and newspapers.
